

FORBIDDEN WORDS & ACCOUNT SAFETY

OnlyFans Chatting — Ban-Risk Reference

Every word and topic in this document is forbidden — in any message, caption, voice note, mass message, or custom. This includes variations ("blo0d" is as forbidden as "blood"), abbreviations, indirect phrasing, jokes about the topic, and even expressing sympathy toward it.

These are already enforced through word-blocking in the CRM — but every chatter should know them cold, because the block can't catch every variation or a spoken/indirect reference.

When you decline, never repeat the request back

WRONG: "no i dont wanna pretend to be ur daughter" (repeats it back)

RIGHT: "nah im not comfortable with that" — then move on, don't engage the topic.

Context matters: some words (e.g. "asshole") are forbidden as an insult but fine as a plain descriptive term. Some words OnlyFans blocks outright — you'll see "Input contains restricted words." When in doubt, rephrase or decline.

DUPLICATE CONTENT — THE SILENT BAN CAUSE

Never send a fan content he has already received — every send, every time, no exceptions. This is one of the biggest non-word ban causes and it's easy to miss.

Before ANY send (PPV, free media, teaser, preview) check all three:

- 1. Gallery — scroll his unlocked history in the chat.
- 2. CreatorHero — his purchase log. NOT always complete — never rely on it alone.
- 3. Fan's Notes — anything already logged as sent to him.

All three. Every time. If any one shows he has it — it doesn't go out.

Why it bans accounts: a fan who spots a duplicate charges back. Chargebacks hit the account's health directly, and enough of them can get the account banned. The bigger the spender, the more he can claw back at once.

OFF-PLATFORM PAYMENTS

Every transaction stays on-platform, always.

Naming an off-platform app can trip an automatic flag

PayPal · Venmo · CashApp · Zelle · ManyVids · Patreon · any off-platform method or competitor platform.

Never take, offer, or even mention an off-platform payment. Keep every sale on OnlyFans.

WHEN TO BLOCK A FAN

Account safety > revenue

One fan is never worth a warning, a strike, a ban, or the creator's reputation.

Block immediately — no discussion — if a fan:

- Threatens to expose, leak, share, screenshot, record, or repost — "I'll leak this," "I'll expose you," "I'll report you unless...," "I saved your content."
- Is intimidating, aggressive, manipulative, or obsessive with anger or entitlement.
- Says anything that could flag, warn, shadowban, or ban the account. If it feels risky, it is risky.

With a risky fan, never:

- Reason with or try to calm a threatening fan.
- Monetize a suspicious or harmful conversation.
- Explain the platform's rules to him, or say "please don't do that."
- Delay reporting because "maybe it's nothing." Delay = risk.

Suspicious fan — report even with no forbidden word:

- His wording feels off, manipulative, or threatening.
- He asks "hypothetical" questions to test limits — dancing around a forbidden topic without saying it outright.
- He keeps pushing boundaries in different ways, or something just feels wrong.

The people who actually get accounts banned usually don't say the banned word — they bait you toward it. If it feels off, stop engaging and report it, don't keep chatting.

Then

Screenshot the messages and the username, block, and report it. Account safety comes first, every time.
